1. During the period from 16 to 18 September 1952, Camp Glau, 2 km northwest of Trebbin (N 53/Z 71), was about half occupied by a signal unit. Almost all garages were closed and the officers billets only lightly occupied. No sentries or patrols were noticed and no training activity was observed. On 17 September, a senior lieutenant and 10 soldiers wearing black-bordered black epaulets with signal insignia were seen laying a steel cable just west of the camp. [] 25X1 25X1

2. During the period from 16 to 18 September, no troops were in Trebbin. All the low barracks buildings of the former Reichsarbeitsdienst (Reich Labor Service) (RAD) camp northwest of the railroad station were dismantled. The former Schuetzenhaus previously occupied by troops was no occupied by civilians. **

* [] Comment. [] the signal regiment of the Third Gds Mecz Army is apparently still stationed in Camp Glau. The report indicates that large contingents of the bulk of the regiment were absent in mid-September. The whereabouts of this regiment is not known.
